Grasshoppers Are a Serious Menace

Grasshoppers are still a serious menace in Southern Alberta, and the indications are that the season of 1935 will see another serious outbreak unless concentrated effort is put forth by the farmers to counteract the pest.

Full cultivation of stubble and is being urged by the provincial and federal authorities as a means of destroying hopper eggs. A great deal of loss resulted this season from the fact that many farmers failed to heed the advice to cultivate stubble fields last fall, and they proceeded to seed those badly infested lands this spring. Many of these fields were a total loss.

Prof. Strickland, of Alberta University, says "It is well known that no grasshoppers lay their eggs in fallow land. Every field which is seeded after fallow, is, therefore, free from hoppers when the latter hatch in the spring. A careful examination of the fence rows at that time, and the use of bait on them wherever hoppers are seen to have hatched in large numbers, will keep such fields free from grasshoppers, at least until they are flying."

"In stubble fields the problem is more serious. Eggs may be laid throughout their length and breadth. These eggs are laid throughout the latter part of the summer and during the fall till heavy frosts kill off all of the eggs-laying females. They are placed just beneath the surface of the soil and, provided they remain undisturbed before winter, practically all of them will hatch in the spring."

"Nearly all of the eggs will perish, however, if the infested stubble be cultivated to a depth of not more than two inches in the fall. A well conducted culture should destroy about 75% of the eggs."

While many farmers are averse to full cultivation which might enhance soil drifting, yet there can be little danger from this if the cultivation is shallow leaving a "trash mulch" on the surface.

Rev. E. G. Hansell

Life Sketch of E. G. Hansell

Mr. Ernest G. Mansell, who was chosen as social credit candidate to run in the Macleod constituency was born in 1889 in Norwich, England. He came to this country in his early boyhood. He came to Calgary in 1911 and not until 1918 did he decide to go into the ministry. He took his theological course in the Bible Institute under the world-famed evangelist and Bible scholar, Dr. R. A. Torrey. After graduating from the Bible Institute he took a three-year post graduate course from the Southern School of Divinity, specializing in psychology, and other subjects. From this school he received his B. D. degree.

After being in the ministry for some years, Mr. Hansell studied law, not for the purpose of ever entering the profession but rather for the purpose of mental discipline. This course was not completed on account of financial reverses.

He was one time Minister with Mr. Aberhart in the Waterton Baptist church in Calgary before the days of the present Bible Institute. He has also held pastorates in Canmore, one of his members there being the present Minister of Agriculture in the Alberta Social Credit Government. He once had a call to become associate minister with Dr. H. H. Bingham, head of Calgary. He has also held pastorates in B.C. Mr. Hansell moved to Vulcan over a year ago, becoming the permanent minister of the Church of Christ.

SHOULDICE NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. M. Edwards and daughter Barbara were visitors to Vulcan last week end.

Mrs. Weiberg was a visitor to Calgary the past week-end.

Mr. H. Allen and Mac Allen who have been visitors to Calgary the week have returned.

Several local men have had good luck in shooting ducks and geese.

Sugar Beet Crop

Total acreage in sugar beets this year in Southern Alberta is approximately 14,000 acres. The anticipated crop is about 150,000 tons, a reduction from last year's record crop of 170,000 tons.

Promoter Sam Moss Presents A Fine Fight Card

Knock-outs Registered By G. Roberts, Wilson and A. Roberts

Following on the heels of the Beer-Louis fight, and with enthusiasm still evident, a large crowd of fans thronged the Mossleigh hall last Saturday night to witness a fine display of fistifluhs put on by several of the best boxers of the district and Alberta. Unlike a number of recent fight cards Saturday's program enthused the spectators to a very high pitch, and everyone who attended went away satisfied with the program as afforded by that sport of the boxing fraternity, Sam Moss.

George Roberts, popular Arrowwood idol, came through in grand style to win the main event in no uncertain manner when he punched and bombarded his way to victory over Joe Bosley of Rainer in the third round of a scheduled eight-round bout. The performance of Bosley must have been a shock to Brooks and Rainer supporters because the Brooks Bulletin speculating on the outcome of the bout stated that late there were favoring Bosley to come through with a victory over Roberts. However Roberts was determined from the onset and when the first round opened both contestants came out of their corners to cautiously view the tactics, and foot out each other. In the second round both boys assumed a more serious aspect and it was evident that each was striving to put over that deciding blow. After a rapid exchange of lousy blows Bosley dropped to the mat for the count of seven. Staging a come-back Bosley cleverly guarded himself and Roberts was unable to follow up with that knock-out blow of the bell ended the round. The next period seemed to give Bosley for the third round opened with a snappy return of blows which kept the crowd in anxiety. Roberts was gradually wearing Bosley down and towards the end of the third round he ground Bosley over a left and a right to the chin sending him to the canvas as Referee Currie counted him out.

"Winnipeg" Wilson had a comparatively easy time in his match with Segard Hegland of Queenstown, and he delivered a hay-maker to the Queenstown fighter in the 4th round of a 6 round bout, to end the fray via the knockout route. Wilson displayed rare boxing ability and was far superior to his opponent both offensively and defensively, showing up in every department of the game. The only bout to go the full route was between Alvin Garraway of Arrowwood and Charles Smith of the Blackfoot Reserve. This arrangement proved to be a very bloody affair and although both exchanged hard punches, at times dynamic enough to stagger his opponent, neither followed with the deciding blow. Garraway was awarded the decision but it was a very unpopular one with the fans.

In the first preliminary bout of the evening Kid Haynes of Rainer failed to appear for his match with A. Roberts of Calgary so J. Roberts of Calgary, a brother to A. Roberts substituted for him. Brotherly love it seems there be, was entirely forgotten in this bout as A. Roberts outpunched his brother unmercifully to win by a knock-out decision. The two main events were handled by referee Currie of Arrowwood while Mark DeWitt handled the preliminaries. Judges for the evening were Ralph Ayling of Arrowwood and R. Rubbelke of Queenstown.

Motorists--- Take It Easy

The highways of North America are dotted with thousands of motor cars as people travel from city to town and town to city, and as they proceed on business journeys. Each and every one of these cars is a high-powered vehicle, capable of doing almost incalculable damage unless handled with judgment and discretion. Whether you and your friends enjoy the motor trip you may be making depends not on the speed you travel, but whether you arrive safely at your destination.

In the United States last year there were almost one million motor accidents, with 36,000 deaths. The accident and death rate in Canada is almost as high. Over last year recording 512 deaths and 8,900 accidents which were not fatal, but many of which meant people scarred and maimed and intense suffering for hundreds.

In the driving of a car, a man reveals himself. It is the thoughtless, selfish, reckless driver that is largely responsible for the toll on the highways. What is gained if a man arrives at his destination a few seconds ahead of schedule? Why do so many men, when seated behind the wheel of a car, act like boys and have behind them every vestige of courtesy and consideration for others?

The motor is a wonderful invention, but in the hands of a man without judgment or balance, is a terrible instrument of destruction, leaving death and maimed lives in its wake.

In the August issue of that popular little magazine "Reader's Digest" there appeared an article entitled "—And Sudden Death" which has attracted continent-wide notice and hundreds of thousands of reprints of which are being distributed throughout Canada and the United States. The only regret is that a copy cannot be placed in the hands of every person who drives an automobile. It is a gruesome record of what automobile accidents really are—a realistic portrayal of the terrible witnessed every day on the highways of this supposedly civilized continent.

The automobile, says the writer of this article, is treacherous, just as a cat is. It is tragically difficult to realize that it can become the deadliest missile. As enthusiasts tell you, it makes 65 an hour feel like nothing at all. But 65 an hour is 100 feet a second, a speed which puts a viciously unjust responsibility on brakes and human reflexes, and can instantly turn this costly luxury into a mad bull gallop.

Collision, turnover or sideways, each type of accident produces either a shattering dead stop or a crashing change of direction—and, since the occupant—meaning you—continues in the old direction at the original speed, every surface and angle of the car's interior immediately becomes a battering, tearing projectile, aimed squarely at you—inescapable. There is no bracing yourself against these imperative laws of momentum.

It's like going over Niagara Falls in a steel barrel full of railroad spikes. The best thing that can happen to you—and one of the rarer things—is to be thrown out as the doors spring open, so you have only the ground to reckon with. True, you strike with as much force as if you had been thrown from the Twentieth Century at top speed. But at least you are spared the lethal array of gleaming metal knobs and edges and glass inside the car.

Anything can happen in that split second of a crash, even those lucky escapes you hear about. People have dived through windshields and come out with only superficial scratches. They have run cars together head-on, reducing both to twisted junk, and been found unhurt and arguing bitterly two minutes afterward. But death was there just the same—and he was only exercising his privilege of choice.

And every time you pass on a blind curve, every time you hit it up on a slippery road, every time you speed to it harder than your reflexes will safely take, every time you drive with your reactions slowed down by a drink or two, every time you follow the man ahead too closely, you're gambling a few seconds against agony and sudden death.

There is an old legal phrase that "time is of the essence of the contract." This is not true in the highway. The revenue is true. Your duty as a driver is to bring safe home not only yourself, but your family and friends who may be travelling with you. Equally, it is your duty to so drive your car as to in no way endanger others but to allow them to likewise reach their homes in safety.

Rebuilt By New Method

Worm Machine Parts Made As Good As New

Fixed at the speed of a rifle bullet, particles of hot metal rebuild worm machine parts by a new method. Screw heads are cut into the metal to be repaired and then the metal is sprayed on the grooves and ridges in such a way that it fuses and becomes part of the metal under treatment. The spraying is done with an electrically operated gun that "shoots" the metal particles through a tiny hole in the nozzle at 2,700 feet per second. The rebuilt parts are smoothed and polished with abrasives, giving long wear. Piston rods, cylinder walls, shafts, bearings and turbines are among the parts treated successfully.—Popular Mechanics.

Jubilee Week Was Busy

King's Secretaries Replied To Over Ten Thousand Messages

Statistics just available give some indication of the work performed by His Majesty's secretaries during the jubilee week. During the period May 3 to 9 the King received 10,264 telegrams from every conceivable part of the world. Every one of a total grand within the British Isles, no matter what his rank or station in life, had a reply sent him by His Majesty or by one of the private secretaries. Overseas messages were similarly answered, the more important by cable, but many by a personal letter from the King's secretaries or His Majesty's representative in the Dominions or Colonies.

Worked Under Difficulties

French Engineers Had Hard Job Building Hotels In Algeria

As the French pushed farther and further southward into the Sahara, pacifying the roving Arab tribes as they go, hotels are being erected for the accommodation of Government officials, visiting Army officers, business men and the occasional venturesome tourist. The hotels had to be taken south, through the desert, in parcels. Each parcel weighed about 200 lbs. and was one camel-load. Caravans after caravans, traveling forty-five days through sands, brought to Timimoun, in the far south of Algeria, the many tons of windows, doors, glass, china, linen, cutlery, furniture, electrical installation and other equipment needed for the local hotel. Neither foremen nor European laborers would agree to go there, so the place was built by French army engineers, who themselves had to trace in the sand the first outline of the building because the superstitious wild Arabs of the region feared The Evil Eye, and would not have anything to do with blue-prints. They did consent to make the mud bricks, however, which form the walls, and to drag up to the site the date-palm trunks for roofing the roof beams and "girders." The rest had to come in parcels. Even the ships of the desert bringing the parcels were temperamental. They would not travel on even such good roads as were to be found along their line of route, but had to be steered over soft sandy courses. Camels suffer from bad spells of foot soreness unless allowed soft tracks.

Drama Festival Finals

Dates Are Set For 1936 Contests In Western Canada

Regulations covering the 1936 Dominion drama festival provide for contests in 13 regions into which Canada is divided for competition, with a final week in Ottawa beginning Monday, April 20.

Issued by J. A. Ayles, honorary secretary-general of the festival, the regulations set the following dates for English play regional festivals in western Canada: British Columbia (Vancouver), Jan. 27 to Feb. 1; Alberta (Calgary), Feb. 6, 7, 8; Saskatchewan (Saskatoon), Feb. 13, 14, 15; Manitoba (Winnipeg), Feb. 20, 21, 22.

Regional festivals for French plays will be held in Quebec City, Montreal and Ottawa on dates to be arranged and announced later.

No play performed in the finals at Ottawa in 1934 or 1935 will be eligible for presentation in 1936. The regulations set forth. As in the past the festival will be restricted to one-act plays or single self-contained scenes from longer plays which occupy not less than 20 and not more than 45 minutes.

Direction of the festival again will be in the hands of Col. H. C. Osborne, honorary director, and an executive committee. In each region a regional committee will have charge.

Predicts Horseless London

Ministry Of Transport Working Toward Mechanizing System

Within five years, it is predicted, the London dray horse will be so rare in London as to be regarded as a curiosity, the streets of 1940 being practically entirely free of horses. The Ministry of Transport is hastening this condition by plans to substitute horse-drawn traffic by a completely mechanized system, and some of these plans will be carried into effect shortly.

The busiest streets in London will be closed to horse-drawn traffic in the near future by regulations soon to be issued by the department. Already there is a device operating in Oxford street between certain hours. Later an edict will be issued that horse-drawn vehicles will not be allowed in London at all after a period of from three to five years.

Under existing traffic legislation, the Minister of Transport, L. Horne-Bellah, has power to put an end to traffic by horse in London's streets. His department, however, has no intention of driving horses from the streets until their owners have had fair warning.

Stop-over privileges go with the tickets within a limit at the stations of Port Arthur, Armstrong and east.

Tickets will be honored in coaches, tourist or standard bedrooms on payment of fare according to the accommodation desired. They will be available from all stations from Port Arthur, Armstrong and west, including Pacific Coast points to all stations including Seattle, San Francisco, Vancouver and east.

This Robin Was Clever

Called Man To Help Rescue Mate From Jail

The story of a robin which called a man to rescue its mate from the jaws of a snake was told Friday.

George Swan, attracted by a bird screaming and dapping against the back door of his home, went to investigate. The robin flew away as he approached, apparently to call him on, and Swan followed.

It led him to the end of the garden stretching close to the fence, calling loudly. There in the grass Swan saw a snake with another robin in its mouth.

He killed the three-foot reptile with a stick and the two birds flew away together.

MISS ALADDIN

—By—

Author of
"One Who Lives To Create"
"The Unknown Port," etc.

SYNOPSIS

Nancy Nelson is a sub-deb, a gay, irresponsible girl of nineteen, with no care beyond the choice of her costume for her coming-out party. Suddenly, in the market crash, her indulgent father loses all he had, and his family is faced with the necessity of a simpler method of living. At this juncture a letter is received from an eccentric relative in Colorado, who offers the girl a home on what seems to be impossible conditions.

After much consideration Cousin Columbine's offer is accepted, and Nancy and Jack arrive at Pine Ridge. Nancy set out on her afternoon to climb to the top of a hill so as to obtain a view of the surrounding landscape and miss the path Adams Tube had told her to follow. A truck comes along the road, driven by Matt Adams, and she asks him which way to go. They ascend the hill, look around, and then go on to Cousin Columbine's. There Mark Adams tells Nancy that his brother Luke has broken his leg, and that Jack Nelson has been hired to help out while Luke's leg gets better. With Jack away, Nancy finds that she is alone, and having no books to read, the idea of starting a public library at Pine Ridge seems a good one, and Nancy writes home to get books, and a suitable book arrived in due course. Father Adam painted a sign for the library, and the Adams boys worked on the shelves for the books and decorations to make the room look presentable.

Now Go On With The Story

To the natives of Pine Ridge the Aladdin library seemed wonderful enough as it was. "And how every one of those blessed Adams had worked!" thought Nancy with gratitude. Father Adam's next lettering told her that the three hundred books which Junia and Mary Taylor had helped her cover with brown paper. They had had fun over it, too. Some of the work was done on winter evenings when Jack and the Adams boys had joined them, as well as a good-looking foot ranger was assigned at church one Sunday, and had contrived to appear at the Nelson mansion at frequent intervals since.

Cousin Adam made and donated creature hangings for the windows. Mother and Mark had built the shelves, low chairs which gilded the whole room, made from lumber they "just found lying around the place," and stained dark brown. Even Jack, busy at school, appeared one week-end with a dozen books; and Luke painted four chairs found in the schoolhouse. Transformed as the Aladdin Club had proved so successful that he insisted on painting Nancy's "desk" as well, and a table for magazines found in Aurora's cellar, while his mother sacrificed a wicker porch chair, cushioned to match the hangings at the window.

"This place would be almost cozy if it weren't for the bare walls," said Mary Taylor. "But don't you mention it! The lack of pictures before Junia's. No knowing what impossible contrivance she might bring in!"

Nancy smiled and answered, "I'll brooder in Cousin Columbine's attic. I saw an old engraving of Lincoln up there the other day."

There was also one of George Washington; and Mary appeared that afternoon with what she said her mother called "a yard of authors' portraits of the New England poets framed in oak."

Eve Adams laughed when she saw this offering.

"It brings things back, Nancy. Stored in our attic is a yard of roses; and we had a yard of kittens in the nursery. That idea used to be all the rage."

"Gee, Mum! I remember those kittens!" Mark paused as he adjusted a crooked window shade. "They had blue ribbons round their necks and extraordinarily long whiskers! But these are good photographs, Nancy. They'll add a literary touch to our decorations."

No wonder Nancy felt a thrill of pride at the result of her planning! Out of what a few short weeks before had been a bare and useless room, had blossomed this cheery little place; and already the people of the village were asking if it couldn't be opened every night. Ten days ago they had had their "first warning," not but chocolate and doughnuts for refreshments—a party which even Victor Tubbs had roused himself sufficiently to attend.

This had been on a Saturday, and the minister who conducted services in the Pine Ridge church twice every month, arrived in time to make a speech. Nancy hadn't counted on that; but it was a good speech, and she liked the minister despite the fact that he referred to her as "our dear young benefactor." Indeed, at this point in his address, Jack had been stricken with attack of choking, and at least four Adams had winked in her direction; while the sophisticated Nancy Nelson had felt her ears grow scarlet with confusion.

Nancy smiled at the memory. She was feeling particularly happy this afternoon for good news had arrived from home. Dad was making a new start with a splendid firm, and had been awarded an unexpectedly good price for the city house.

"In some ways it's a wrench to give it up!" wrote her mother, "but we can't lose this chance, and in any case we shall stay in Edgemore for several years. Phil loves his school; and I am loving the life of a country town here. It's such a joy to know your father his cheerful self once more. These anxious months have brought him some grey hairs; but he's happy and interested, and wondering if you're not almost ready to come home."

Home! The girl drew a long, long breath. It would be wonderful to see Dad and Mother and Phil and the aunts, and all the old crowd, of course; but Cousin Columbine was going to miss her faithfully. And she couldn't leave until the library was running smoothly and she found somebody to fill her place.

Nancy looked forward, lifting a child's bank which was placed on her desk for voluntary contributions, and smiled at a reassuring rattle her mother had sent.

The first donation had come from a small girl who said, as she dropped in a shining penny, "It's to your library, Miss Adams. I'm nothing but ever pleased Nancy Hall so much as this innocent mistake in her identity. Matthew Adams was going to miss her faithfully. And she couldn't leave until the library was running smoothly and she found somebody to fill her place."

The bank had flourished. Yesterday Junia had contributed the price of three copies of new magazines, and was really enjoying some decent novels. Two boys from a nearby ranch whom Nancy had supposed little better than her schoolmates, were devouring good travel books; and the wife of a health-seeker two miles back of the village, told Nancy what she had thrown her a snail of appreciative understanding; while his father was so delighted with the application that he'd addressed her as Miss Aladdin ever since.

"And to think," said Cousin Columbine when the girl recounted this pathetic incident, "that I've been too thoughtless to look up those people and their library. How could I! Sick folks come and go that we take them too much for granted. I'm ashamed of myself. No wonder they called it 'The Aladdin'!"

Steps sounded without, and Nancy glanced up. It was not yet two o'clock, but someone was coming. Then the door swung back to admit her brother and Matthew Adams. Luke was about again now; and Jack was job hunting.

"Any luck?" asked Nancy, as the boys drew up two gay red chairs.

Matthew nodded.

"Your kid brother seems to profit by the misfortunes of others. Luke breaks a leg, and Jack gets his job. And now my brother Matthew has a ranch out on the plains, is down with flu along with two of his men, and has sent an S.O.S. for one as fellows to help them out. Mark's drawn the unlucky number, and Jack's going back to the ranch again to take his place."

"Wonderful of him," "I'm sorry to have Mark go, of course, but it's marvellous for Jack; and sometimes there are compensations."

"A lot of sympathy you have for Uncle Tom!" grinned Matthew. Nancy laughed.

"I was seriously wondering how long you would last. Time goes so rapidly; and some day we've got to turn our faces to the East, you know."

Jack said nothing; and suddenly Matt's color rose.

"Why—your not leaving us this spring, are you? I—I mean Miss Columbine said you'd stay a year!"

"I know; but such a thought never entered our heads, Matt. And now Dad's drawn another start I'm pretty sure they'll want us to come home. Not that I don't dread leaving Cousin Columbine. I'm awfully afraid she's going to miss us."

Jack still staid, arose and went over to a window. Matthew sat looking into space. "Home—some of the rest of us will miss you too, Nancy," he said surprisingly. "There's even Victor Tubbs to attend."

Nancy laughed outright, and asked, eyes lighted with merriment: "You put a pretty speech like that, Matt?"

"Spill it!"

"Jack came back, grinning, and slumped into the cushioned chair. He said, 'I'm rather starry-eyed, you know; there's no time to mention Tom!'

Honest, Nancy, have we got to go this spring?"

"You don't want to?" questioned his sister.

"Do you?" he countered.

The girl was silent, looking down at the toe of Matthew's boot. "I don't know, exactly," she said at last. "I'm crazy to see every one at home, of course, but I rather starry-eyed through the summer. But I wonder if Cousin Columbine won't miss us now; and even if we leave her in the fall, Spring is a cheerful time of year, you know; she's getting old."

It was Matthew's turn to stand at the window, looking out and wondering he said over his shoulder: "You're going to leave a big hole in Pine Ridge, folks."

"Have observed Jack," "we haven't gone yet, better; and don't they tell us it's better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all?"

He laughed, but Matt, still gazing at Pike's Peak, responded soberly: "Wherever wrote that bunk was feeble-minded!" and added, moving toward the door, eyes turned discreetly away from Miss Aladdin: "Come on, Jack, we must get going. Mark'll drop in to-morrow to see Luke."

Good-bye, Nancy, Luke's driving him to the Springs where somebody from Prairie House had picked him up. He says he feels as if he were sentenced to Siberia, though it's the first time he hasn't jumped at the chance of going to Uncle Tom's! I—I wonder why?"

Nancy smiled at this subtle compliment, and went to the door to see her library. There was a glimpse of the plains from her little porch, and as they lingered a moment the girl asked, her eyes on that unobtrusive visitor: "Does your uncle live right on the prairie, Matt?"

The young man nodded.

"Sixty miles out, in a big old rambling ranch house surrounded by cottonwoods—a bully place. Those plains are wonderful, Nancy, and sometimes treacherous, too. We'll take you out after the weather's settled. No knowing what thrilling adventures we may have!"

Light words. . . Matt little thought that only a few weeks later they would come back to him during long, tragic hours which none of them was ever to forget.

Man Who Sold Maurelania's Furnishings Had Luck

A record of the auctioneer's voice was made during the sale of the Maurelania's furnishings, and was sold away for the benefit of posterity in the Gallery of Famous Voices and Famous Occasions in Broadcast House in London. The auctioneer's voice will keep company with some of Britain's greatest men and women, from the King and Queen down.

Place Of Historic Interest

Fort Churchill Eloquent With Stories of Courage and Disaster

The other day Fort Churchill, Canada's northern post on the Hudson Bay and the prairie's back door to the salt seas, was celebrating the opening of its shipping season, and the public lease the development of Churchill has been almost talked into it was ridiculed and bitterly attacked when the rails were being laid and the grain terminals were under construction. But as a place of historic interest it has great significance and fascination.

For more than three hundred years ships have sailed into the Hudson Bay from the ports of Great Britain and Europe. Into it came the early explorers in their search for the northwest passage to the Orient and Canada. By this route the first live stock and the first piano ever brought to the opening west were crated in sturdy sailing vessels.

And at Churchill English and French held forts now crumbled into ruins. Here the Danish explorer, Hans, in the early part of the seventeenth century, survived a bitter winter in which most of his companions perished. Many decades later, in 1812, the gallant Selkirk settlers struggled with nature in the environs of the port; held their chins high in a steady task, and before they could start on the trek to their new homes in the south, Churchill is eloquent with stories of courage, treachery and disaster.

The Mub-Arch holds its lure to the adventurous to this day. The annals of this new Canadian port may still be read in the determination of the pioneer explorers and settlers to break the hostile barriers of nature in a new land—Hamilton Spectator.

The Anthony Eden Touch

London Bazaar Made German Passenger Feel At Home

Whether London Transport is aware of it or not, at least one of its staff possesses the Anthony Eden touch.

A west-bound 19 bus a young German seated in front of me ten days ago. He was a "Piedicelli." The conductor asked which end of Piedicelli he meant, but the passenger's English was limited to the words "Piedicelli" and "Piedicelli."

Thereupon the conductor broke into fluent German, and the matter was adjusted. The delighted passenger moved to a seat beside the door, and a long conversation, glowing with international amity, followed.

They parted with effusive Auf Wiedersehens.—London Daily Sketch.

Egyptian Shortland

Papers Recently Discovered Show System Many Centuries Old

Three pieces of ancient Egyptian "paper" were discovered not long ago. On them were marks which proved very interesting, for they were clearly a system of shorthand many centuries old. Actually these treasures dated from the third century A.D. and there could be no doubt about them, for there was a perfect good longhand "translation" given with the shorthand signs. It was this last fact which made the documents most interesting, for it gave the key to other manuscripts which until then had been mysteries that nobody was able to explain.

Little Helps For This Week

The Lord shall give thee rest from thy sorrow and from thy fear, and from the hard bondage wherein thou wast made to serve. . . Isaiah 14:3.

Today beneath thy chastening eye, I crave alone for peace and rest; Submitting in Thy hand all things, And feel that it is best.

O Lord, who art as a shadow of a great rock in a weary land, who be-holdeth Thy weak creatures weary of labor, weary of pleasure, weary of hope deferred, weary of self; in Thine own good time, O Lord, have Thine tender mercies, bring us unto Thy rest.

Thou hast made us for Thyself; and our heart is restless until it rests in Thee, craved to us above all things, that can be desired, to rest in Thee, to have our hearts at peace. Thou art the true peace of the heart, Thou only art rest. In this very peace that is in Thee, the one Chiefest End, Good, we will sleep and rest.

FARMERS ATTENTION!

DESTROY GRASSHOPPER EGGS By Fall Cultivation

Reports indicate that hoppers are very numerous this fall, as owing to late hatching of eggs when crops are well advanced, farmers underestimated the numbers present and did not spread bait in sufficient quantities.

If weather conditions remain favorable there is every indication of another outbreak in 1936.

Cultivation should be done as soon as possible, as a loose surface will not be conducive to further egg laying, and will assist in the destruction of those eggs already laid.
